Frontend Web Developer

Hello, you. Let me tell you a story.

A few months ago I went through a heartbreak. While I was going through the usual sad and crying stages of heartbreak, my cousin came to me and convinced me to learn to code. After doing some research on my own I sat in front of my computer to learn to code and haven't got up since then.

After starting to build my own website I was amazed how coding invoked my creative side and interest in creating and building something. And it quickly became one thing that keep me up all night, without coffee.

Since I learned how much I could do with coding, I have done my best to make coding my daily routine. I enrolled in Bloc Online Bootcamp and always search for ideas for my articles and challenge myself with learning a new thing every day. So keeping myself busy with new challenges, I was back to normal from the heartbreak.

With my new knowledge of coding, plus previous work experiences I believe I can be good value to any company and deliver a good work.

Thank you for taking the time to read my story.
